INTRODUCTION

"NOTABLE Men of Illinois and Their State," like "Notable Men of Chicago and Their City," is intended to be a book of ready utility for the newspaper editor and artist. It is issued as a practical publication to meet the newspaper demand for illustration.

"Notable Men of Chicago and Their City" was received with so much enthusiasm and thankfulness by the newspapers and magazines of the United States that encouragement was given the publisher to undertake the compilation of this volume.

Biographically, the work contains salient facts furnished by the subjects themselves.

The chief aim, however, is to put into the reference libraries of American publishers reproductions in half-tone of recent photographs of men prominent in the commercial, professional, official, political and social activity of the state of Illinois.

DWARD MORRIS, head of the world-known packing-house of Morris & Company, is one of a generation of Chicago business men who are called upon to retain for the great central market the supremacy by enlarging huge pioneer enterprises and keeping them apace with the amazing extension of Chicago's commercial domain.

Mr. Morris is the son of Nelson and Sarah (Vogel) Morris. He was born on Oct. 1, 1866, in Chicago, where his father was one of the founders of the city's packing industry. He attended the public schools until he was fourteen years old, when his father started him at the bottom rung of the ladder in the Morris packing-house. Edward proved an apt beginner and his responsibilities were increased as his father's own age and health made it difficult for him to give to the Morris enterprise the time and attention that had developed it from a small beginning to vast proportions.

Upon the death of his father, in 1907, Edward Morris became the head of the enterprise and at once inaugurated the policy of continuing along the conservative lines that had given it prestige in the business and financial worlds.

He is now president and treasurer of Morris & Company, and is identified with numerous other large corporations as officer or director. He is a director of the First National Bank of Chicago, and holds a similar position with the National Live Stock Bank. He is also a director of Rothschild & Company, the big State Street department store.

Mr. Morris is a member of the Chicago Board of Trade and his clubs are the Mid-Day, the South Shore Country and the Standard. His residence is at 4455 Grand Boulevard and his office is at the Union Stock Yards.

OHN STOCKER MILLER, one of the leading lawyers of the Chicago and American bar, is the son of John and Jane (McLeod) Miller. He was born at Louisville, St. Lawrence county, New York, May 24, 1847, and received the degree of A. B. from St. Lawrence University at Canton, N. Y., in 1869. He studied in the law department of the same institution from 1868 to 1870 and was admitted to the New York bar at Ogdensburg, in the latter year.

Mr. Miller was professor of mathematics at his alma mater during 1871 and 1872 and during the two years following, taught Greek and Latin. He moved to Chicago in 1874 and began the practice of law with George Herbert and John H. S. Quick, the firm, in 1876, becoming Herbert, Quick & Miller.

The firm became Quick & Miller after the death of Mr. Herbert. This connection lasted until 1886, when Mr. Miller formed a partnership with Henry W. Leman. Merritt Starr was admitted in 1890 and later George R. Peck succeeded Mr. Leman, the firm then being styled Peck, Miller & Starr. The firm is now Miller, Starr, Packard & Peckham.

Mr. Miller was corporation counsel of the city of Chicago from 1891 to 1893 and argued in behalf of the city the celebrated lake front case against the Illinois Central Railroad company. He was of counsel for the beef packers in the celebrated case which ended in their acquittal in the United States court in Chicago, 1912.

CHARLES MORGAN HEWITT, president of the Hewitt Manufacturing Company of Chicago, is one of the natives of the Wolverine state who have put their impress upon the record of the commercial achievements of Chicago.

Mr. Hewitt was born in Detroit, Mich., Aug. 7, 1857, the son of Elias and Elizabeth (Wheatly) Hewitt. He attended the public schools of Detroit, where, upon his graduation, he entered the railroad business. Mr. Hewitt began at the bottom of the ladder and rose rapidly. He held several important positions of responsibility and trust with the Pullman Palace Car Company at Pullman, Ill., from 1881 to 1886. A man of great personal initiative, Mr. Hewitt saw an opportunity to establish a business of his own. He left the Pullman corporation to engage in a manufacturing industry.

His business enterprises have steadily grown until now he is president of the Hewitt Manufacturing Company brass founders, president of the Featherstone Foundry and Machine Company, president of the Hewitt Supply Company, and president of the National Brake Shoe Company. He also is interested in a financial executive way with other companies engaged along similar lines.

While Mr. Hewitt's numerous business activities make him an extremely busy man, he, nevertheless, finds time to indulge a liking for golf. He is a member of the South Shore Country, Glen View, Exmoor and Chicago Golf clubs of Chicago, the Oakland Golf Club of Bayside, Long Island, and the Golf Links of America, of Southampton, Long Island.

Mr. Hewitt is also a member of the Chicago Union League, Union, Mid-Day, Hamilton and Chicago Automobile clubs and the Chicago Athletic Association of Chicago, and the New York Athletic, New York and Railroad clubs of New York. His residence is at 1455 N. State Street and his office is in the Railway Exchange Building.

JOHN MILLARD ROACH, street railway official, is one of the sons of Ohio who has assisted materially in building the Chicago of to-day.

Mr. Roach was born at Lowell, Ohio, Jan. 30, 1851, the son of John M. and Sarah Ann (Mackey) Roach. He received his academic education at Beverly and Athens, Ohio. He came to Chicago to carve out his career and his first employment was in 1872, as a conductor on the North Chicago Street Railway line. He continued this occupation for fifteen years, during which the now obsolete horse-car was the means of transportation in Chicago's streets.

In 1887, Mr. Roach was promoted to the position of assistant superintendent and in 1890 he was made superintendent. He was elected second vice-president and general manager of the North Side line in 1893, and following the consolidation of the West and North side lines, he assumed wider duties. He was made vice-president and general manager of the West Chicago Street Railway Company in 1897, and president of the Cicero & Proviso Street Railway Company and of the Suburban Railway Company in the same year. He was vice-president of the Chicago Union Traction Company from 1899 to 1908, and president of the Chicago Consolidated Traction Company from 1901 to 1910. He has been president of the Chicago Railways Company, embracing all the surface roads of the city, since 1908.

Mr. Roach has been president of the American Street and Interurban Railways Association. He was chosen as the delegate of the street railways of the United States to the Paris exposition but had to decline the honor because of the press of his official duties.

Mr. Roach is a member of the Union League, Chicago Golf, Exmoor Country and Press clubs. His office is at 1165 N. Clark St.

GEN. SMITH D. ATKINS, postmaster of the city of Freeport, Ill., for more than forty years, and editor of the Freeport Journal for many years, was born near Elmira, N. Y., June 9, 1836. He was a lad of ten years when he came to Illinois with his father's family, their home being established on a farm, where he continued until 1850. He then determined to learn the printer's trade, and to this end entered the office of the Prairie Democrat, the first newspaper of Freeport. Realizing the value of and ambitious to secure an education, he pursued a course of study in the Rock River Seminary at Mt. Morris, Ill., working in the printing office and studying during his leisure hours. In 1852, while yet a student, he was appointed foreman of the Mt. Morris Gazette, and in June, 1853, in connection with C. C. Allen, he purchased the paper and also established the Register at Savannah, Carroll county. In the fall of the same year he became a law student under the direction of Hiram Bright, of Freeport, and was admitted to the bar June 27, 1855. Following his admission General Atkins continued to read law for some time in the office of Goodrich & Scoville, of Chicago, and then entered upon active practice in Freeport Sept. 1, 1856.

Interested in the important questions which were arousing the attention of the nation, in 1860 he made a spirited canvass in support of Abraham Lincoln and the address which he made during the campaign and which was a careful and thorough review of the Dred Scott decision was published and went through several editions. In that year he was elected as state's attorney for the fourteenth judicial circuit. He was in the midst of a trial of a criminal case in the Stephenson circuit court when a telegram was received that President Lincoln had issued his first call for troops. General Atkins had watched with interest the progress of events in the South and his soul was stirred to its depths by the rebellious attitude of the Confederacy. Before leaving the court room he drafted an enlistment roll which he headed with his own name, thus being the first man to enlist as a private soldier in Stephenson county. His war record was brilliant. He was brevetted brigadier-general for gallantry and was assigned to duty under commission as brevet brigadier general by special order of President Lincoln. He commanded a brigade of cavalry during Sherman's campaign in the Carolinas and at the close of the war, when he was mustered out, he was brevetted major-general.

JOHN SUMNER RUNNELLS, son of John and Huldah (Staples) Runnells, is a native of New Hampshire, and a descendant in the fourth generation of the last survivor of the Battle of Bunker Hill. He attended the public schools of Tamworth and the New Hampton Academy, and entered Amherst College at the age of sixteen, graduating in 1865. He began the study of law at Dover, N. H., and in 1867 removed to Iowa. He was private Secretary to Governor Merrill of that state in 1868 and 1869. In the latter year he was appointed consul at Tunstall, England, by President Grant, remaining there until 1871, when he returned to Iowa, was admitted to the bar, and entered upon the practice of his profession at Des Moines. In 1875 he was elected reporter of the supreme court of Iowa, and edited eighteen volumes of the court's decisions, while also attending to his regular practice.

His standing as a practitioner was recognized by his appointment by President Arthur in 1881 as United States District Attorney for Iowa, his service in that capacity continuing for four years. He was a prominent figure in republican politics in Iowa, being chairman of the state central committee from 1879 to 1880; delegate to the republican national convention in 1880, and member of the republican national committee, 1880 to 1884.

In 1887, he removed to Chicago, and in 1888 became general counsel of the Pullman Company. In May, 1905, he was elected vice-president of that company, filling that office until May, 1911, when he was elected president, which position he now holds.

Mr. Runnells has long been well known as an after-dinner speaker, and as an orator upon political occasions, but he has withdrawn entirely from public speaking. He is the senior member of the law firm of Runnells, Burry & Johnstone, Chicago, although not in active practice. Mr. Runnells was married March 31, 1869, to Helen R. Baker. They have four children — Mabel (Mrs. Robert I. Jenks), Lucy (Mrs. A. A. Jackson), Clive, and Alice Rutherford.

Mr. Runnells has been president of the Chicago Club continuously since 1907. He is also president of the Saddle and Cycle Club, and is a member of the Chicago Literary, Union, University and Onwentsia clubs of Chicago, and of the University Club of New York City.

FROM brakeman to vice-president of a big railroad company has been the achievement of William Lee Park of the Illinois Central Railroad, in charge of operation.

Mr. Park was born at Obid, Mich., July 6, 1859, the son of Col. Josiah B. Park. He moved with his family to Omaha, Neb., in 1866 and attended the public schools of that city. Later he was a student at Baylie's College, Keokuk, Ia.

His first railroad service was as a brakeman on the Union Pacific Railway, at the age of sixteen years. At the age of eighteen he was a freight conductor and at twenty-two was advanced to the position of passenger conductor.

It was in the early days of his railroad career that Mr. Park developed those qualities which later were rewarded with success and honors.

He was not content to perform merely the physical labors of the positions which he held, but he made a study of railroading and especially of the organization and management of the system with which he was employed. He endeavored to get the viewpoint of the officials above him and the viewpoint of the traveling public on the routine duties that came to him as an employe. It was not long before he made himself invaluable to his superiors and a man on whose reliability and judgment they could depend. As his experience and study widened, his duties were constantly enlarged.

In 1889 he was made superintendent of the Nebraska division of the Union Pacific and in 1900 superintendent of the Wyoming division. In June, 1904, he was made general superintendent of the entire Union Pacific system, with headquarters at Omaha. After serving six years in that capa. city, he was elected to his present position with the Illinois Central, in 1910. His office is in the Central Station, Lake Front and Twelfth St., Chicago.

WILLIAM HALE THOMPSON, one of the leaders of Chicago political, business and social life, was born in Boston, Mass., May 14, 1869, the son of William Hale and Medora (Gale) Thompson. He was brought by his parents to Chicago in his infancy and was educated in the public schools, the Fessenden preparatory school and the Metropolitan Business College.

He spent several years on cattle ranches in Wyoming and Montana, and when his father's death recalled him to Chicago during his twenty-first year, he was the owner of a ranch in western Nebraska stocked with 6,000 head of cattle. He has been in active charge of the Thompson Estate for twenty-two years, and is one of the best-informed men in the city on Chicago real estate.

Mr. Thompson is a republican and served in the council as alderman from the second ward during 1900 and 1901. He was instrumental in the passage of the city ordinance for the establishment for the first Chicago children's free playground, at Wabash Avenue and Twenty-fourth Street. He was elected county commissioner in 1902 and served two years.

Mr. Thompson has been active in the world of sports. For two seasons, 1895 and 1896, he was captain of the Chicago Athletic Association football team, which, in the latter year, carried off the championship honors of the United States among athletic clubs. He is noted as a yachtsman and owns and sails the "Valmore," which has won the 331-mile race from Chicago to Mackinac Island three times during the past four years. He was, for many years, a member of the Chicago Athletic Association water polo team.

In 1904, with four associates, Mr. Thompson organized the Illinois Athletic Club. He negotiated a ninety-nine year lease on the site which the club's building occupies in Michigan Avenue and financed the building of the million-dollar club house. He was the first president of the club, and served in that capacity for four years. His office is at 38 South Dearborn Street.

LFRED STROMBERG, of Chicago, manufacturer of telephone apparatus, was born near Stockholm, Sweden, fifty years ago. His father was a pioneer Swedish manufacturer of threshing machines and other farming implements, and Alfred, early in life, showed an aptitude for mechanical contrivances. He began work in electrical plants of his native country and in Denmark and became grounded in the fundamentals of electricity and especially of telephone building. He assisted in the test of the first Bell telephone instruments sent to Stockholm and from 1870 to 1880 did considerable work on the installation of telephone exchanges there. Later he had charge of the installation of exchanges throughout the northern peninsular and Denmark.

He came to the United States in 1883 and began as a workman for the Bell company. For five years he was employed in the instrument department of the Bell company in Chicago, and during that time he perfected a number of inventions. He later worked for the Thomson-Houston Electric Company, installing lighting systems in Chicago, this employment being followed by his appointment as superintendent of the Chicago Protective Company's burglar alarm system.

On the date of the expiration of the fundamental patents on the telephone receiver, Mr. Stromberg started the development of independent telephone apparatus. He was the controlling spirit in the organization of the Stromberg-Carlson Telephone Manufacturing Company. It was said to be due to the evolution by this firm of the central energy system to compete with the common battery system that made the independent telephone business profitable and opened the door for the establishment of the 25,000 separate locally owned companies operating more than 5,000,000 telephones in the United States. Mr. Stromberg has large interests in Cuban plantations and in various other enterprises. He is at the head of the Stromberg Electric Company and is also interested in the Simplex Manufacturing Company. He has a beautiful home at 5442 Sheridan Road, Chicago.

ALFRED STROMBERG

ALTER CLYDE JONES, lawyer and state senator of Chicago, was born at Pilot Grove, Ia., Dec. 27, 1870, the son of Jonathan and Sarah (Buffington) Jones. He received his early education in the grammar and high schools at Keokuk, Ia.; next he attended the Iowa State College at Armes, Ia., where he graduated with the degree of B. M. E., later receiving the honorary degree of M. E. He took a course at the Chicago College of Law, graduating in 1894, and in 1895 he graduated from Lake Forest University, with the degree of LL. B. In 1896 he began practicing law in Chicago. In 1897 he formed a partnership, under the style of Ludington & Jones; this firm continued until 1899, when the firm of Jones & Addington was formed; later Mr. Ames became a member, and thereafter Mr. Seibold was admitted, the title becoming Jones, Addington, Ames & Seibold, having offices both in Chicago and New York City. The Chicago office is situated at No. 105 West Monroe Street, and the New York office at 2 Rector Street.

Mr. Jones was elected state senator from the Hyde Park district on the republican ticket in 1906, and was re-elected in 1910. From 1907 to 1909 he was a member of the Chicago charter convention. In the special session of 1908 he introduced and led the fight for the enactment of the first direct primary law in Illinois, and when this law was declared unconstitutional by the supreme court he rewrote the law to meet the objections of the supreme court and led the fight in the legislature which resulted in the re-enactment of the law.

Mr. Jones was made chairman of the republican steering committee and floor leader of the senate during the session of 1909 and the special session of 1910. In the session of 1911 he was chairman of the senate executive committee and republican floor leader. He is the author (conjointly with K. H. Addington) of "Jones & Addington's Annotated Statutes of Illinois," also of the "Encyclopedia of Illinois Laws." He is the editor (conjointly with K. H. Addington) of the "Appellate Court Reports of Illinois." Mr. Jones is treasurer and a director of the Benjamin Electric Mfg. Co. and vice-president and a director of the Stromberg Electric Company. He is a member of the following clubs: Union League, University, Hamilton, City, Press, Quadrangle, Kenwood and Homewood, all of Chicago, and of the Cosmos of Washington, D. C., of the Lawyers' of New York City, the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers of New York, the Illinois State Bar Association, the Chicago Bar Association, and was lately president of the Chicago Electrical Association.

REAT projects of river and lake improvement have marked the development of Chicago and other cities on Lake Michigan and the other great lakes, and as a consequence large companies, capable of handling immense contracts, have grown up. Among these is the Great Lakes Dredge & Dock Company, of which William Anthony Lydon is the president.

Mr. Lydon was born in Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 9, 1863. He was the son of Michael B. and Anna (Hopkins) Lydon.

He went through the courses of the grammar and high schools and received the degree of B. M. at Lehigh University, at South Bethlehem, Pa., in 1886 and the degree of E. M., in 1887.

After his graduation, Mr. Lydon came to Chicago and entered the service of the city as a civil engineer. He was employed on several big improvement projects from 1887 to 1890 and in 1891 was one of the organizers of the Lydon & Drews Company, general river and harbor contractors. He was a member of that company from 1891 until 1904, when it was merged with other large firms in a similar line of endeavor into the Great Lakes Dredge & Dock Company, of which he has been president since its formation.

Mr. Lydon is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the Western Society of Engineers and Delta Upsilon fraternity.

His clubs include the South Shore, the Iroquois, the Chicago Athletic Association, the Chicago Engineers', the Chicago Yacht and the Columbia Yacht. In politics he is a democrat. His office is in the Monroe Bldg., Chicago.

The plant owned and operated by the Great Lakes Dredge & Dock Company includes 35 dredges, 36 tugs and steamboats, 180 deck and dump scows, 6 large drill boats for drilling and blasting submarine rock, 40 shore and floating pile drivers, 50 shore and floating derricks. If the equipment of the company were collected and placed end to end, it would extend in a line more than four miles. Among the works completed or now under way by the Great Lakes Dredge & Dock Company in Chicago are the dredging of the outer harbor basin, the construction of the Chicago outer lighthouse and the construction of the concrete superstructure on the north pier. This company has constructed almost every bridge spanning the Chicago river.

WILLIAM KISSACK, civil engineer and contractor of Chicago, was born in Liverpool, England, May 15, 1859, the son of Thomas Kissack, a well-known English architect. Mr. Kissack's early education was received at the Hollybank school, Birkdale, Lancashire, from which he went to the engineering school of Liverpool University College.

After getting his college degree, Mr. Kissack practiced his profession for seven years in England, paying particular attention to sewerage. He was also engaged on coast defense work and in different branches of the government ordnance survey under the officers of the corps of royal engineers.

Chicago attracted Mr. Kissack, and he moved to the metropolis of the West in 1883. He was associated with John A. Cole as assistant engineer on municipal work in the suburbs around Chicago and in the construction of the long tunnel under the bed of Lake Michigan for the Hyde Park waterworks.

He joined the engineering department of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, in 1884, and in that capacity served two years. During 1886–7 he was employed with the Chicago West Division Railway and during 1887–8–9 was engaged in the construction of the line of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railroad from Kansas City to Chicago.

Mr. Kissack was town engineer of Cicero in 1889 and 1890 and in the latter year became a member of the firm of Kissack & Muir, contractors. This connection lasted until 1895, when he entered the contracting business for himself. He became paving superintendent for the Dolese & Shepard Company and organized and managed the Union Paving Company for that company until 1902.

From 1902 to 1910 Mr. Kissack was president and general manager of the American Crushed Stone Company, and for the last two years he has been in the paving and general contracting business for himself.

He is a Mason and an Elk and a life member of the Chicago Press Club. He was married in Chicago on Jan. 11, 1886, to Julia Cecilia Buechner of Pfungstadt, Germany. Office, Chamber of Commerce Bldg.

WILLIAM KISSACK

BRODE BEDFORD DAVIS, of the Chicago bar, was born at Lewis, Ia., on Jan. 15, 1868, the son of Mahlon J. and Priscilla K (Shuman) Davis. He graduated from the University of Iowa and graduated with the degree of LL. B. from the University of Michigan, in 1890.

Mr. Davis was admitted to the bar in Illinois and Michigan in 1890, and from 1892 to 1900 was a member of the Chicago law firm of Walker & Davis. Later he was an office associate of Frank O. Lowden, and Frederick R. Babcock and associated with John M. Rankin.

Mr. Davis has been prominent in some of the most important litigation before the courts in Chicago in recent years, notably the celebrated packers' "immunity bath" case. He also has been before the supreme court of the United States in several railroad cases of great importance.

He is a member of the American Bar Association, the Illinois Bar Association, the Chicago Bar Association and of the following clubs; Union League, University, Calumet, Mid-Day, Illinois Athletic, Hamilton, City, Chicago Law and the Chicago Athletic Association.

Mr. Davis was connected with the aldermanic graft investigation in Chicago as special counsel of the investigating committee.

He has not achieved prominence in the practice of law alone, but has made a success of several business undertakings. He is a director of the Mahin Advertising Agency, of Chicago, and also is president of the Battle Creek Breakfast Food Company, Limited.

Mr. Davis has taken leading part in republican politics in Chicago.

His office is at 108 S. La Salle St.

BRODE B. DAVIS

FEW financiers of Chicago are better known than Henry Augustus Blair, who was born at Michigan City, Ind., July 6, 1852, the son of Chauncey Buckley and Caroline O. (De Graff) Blair. Mr. Blair was educated at Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Mass., and after leaving school in 1871 moved to Chicago and entered the service of the Merchants' National Bank, of which his father had been the founder.

Mr. Blair remained with the Merchants' Bank until 1902, when its consolidation with the Corn Exchange National Bank found him in the position of vice-president. Mr. Blair was appointed receiver of the North Chicago Street Railway and of the West Chicago Street Railway and remained in that position until both the lines were consolidated with the Chicago Railways Company.

Few men have exerted a wider influence on the transportation lines of Chicago than Mr. Blair. It was mainly through his efforts that the merger of the elevated railroads of the city was brought about. He was the chief promoter of the absorption of the Consolidated Traction Company by the Chicago Railways Company, resulting in the practical unification of the street railways of the city, and his energies and counsel have been directed toward the rapid rehabilitation of the railway properties of the entire city.

He is vice-president of the Illinois Trust and Savings bank and director of the Union Trust Company, the Calumet and Chicago Canal & Dock Company, the Elgin National Watch Company, and the Commonwealth Edison Company. Mr. Blair is chairman of the board of directors of the Chicago Railways Company and belongs to the following clubs: Chicago, Union League, C. A. A., Caxton, Chicago Golf, Midlothian, South Shore, Exmoor, Onwentsia and Saddle and Cycle. His office is in the Borland Blk.

ALBERT J. EARLING, president of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, has worked his way to the top from a beginning made as agent at a small Wisconsin station of the road of which he is now the head.

Mr. Earling was born at Richfield, Wis., Jan. 19, 1849. At the age of seventeen he had had a common school education and had taken up the study of telegraphy. He began his service with the Chicago, Milwaukee, & St. Paul company as telegraph operator in 1866 at the station at Watertown, Wis. He served as telegrapher and train dispatcher nine years, assistant superintendent four years, division superintendent two years, from 1882 to 1884, and was assistant general superintendent from 1884 to 1888.

Promotion to general superintendent followed and Mr. Earling served in that capacity until 1890. He was general manager from 1890 to 1899 and second vice-president from 1895 to 1899. He has occupied the position of president since September, 1899. Under Mr. Earling's direction, the Pacific coast extension of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway was projected and built, giving the road access direct to western tidewater. His office is in the Railway Exchange Building.

Mr. Earling's success as a railroad man is attributed by his friends and colleagues to his untiring devotion to duty, no problem being too involved to be solved and no barrier too high to be surmounted. An unusual power of mental concentration and a splendid physique, making him capable of withstanding long periods of physical labor without fatigue, have contributed to his rise. These qualities were thoroughly tested when the Pacific coast extension of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road was carried to completion. Mr. Earling followed the work step by step, from the earliest beginning, and no feature of it, from the smallest detail to the most gigantic of the engineering feats, escaped hs personal attention and direction.

JOHN JACOB HERRICK, one of the leading lawyers practicing at the Chicago bar, is a native Illinoisan, having been born at Hillsboro, on May 25, 1845, the son of Dr. William B. and Martha (Seward) Herrick. His father was the first president of the Illinois State Medical Society.

Mr. Herrick prepared himself for his college course at Lewiston Falls, Maine. He attended Bowdoin College and graduated with the highest honors, the valedictorian of his class. For two years he taught school in Hyde Park and attended law school, at the same time working in the law office of Higgins, Swett & Quigg. He graduated from law school in 1868 and was admitted to the Illinois bar the same year. He remained with the firm of Higgins, Swett & Quigg, until 1871, when he entered practice on his own account. In 1878, with Wirt Dexter, he established the Chicago law firm of Dexter, Herrick & Allen.

In the years that he has practiced at the Chicago bar Mr. Herrick has won an enviable reputation as a successful counselor and trial lawyer. He has participated in some of the most important cases before the courts.

He is now a member of the firm of Herrick, Allen & Martin. He has membership in the Chicago Bar Association, the Chicago Law Institute, and the Citizens' Association of Chicago, He belongs to the University, Saddle and Cycle, Chicago, Chicago Literary and Onwentsia clubs. His office is at 72 W. Adams St.

Mr. Herrick married Julie T. Du'on in New York City, June 28, 1883. They have three children, Clara M., Julie T. and Margaret J. Herrick. The Herrick residence is at 45 E. Schiller St.

SYMPATHETIC interest in all mankind, and especially the unfortunate, the weak, the poor and the oppressed, has been responsible for the fame as an expert in reform and correctional methods which has come to John Lorin Whitman, superintendent of the House of Correction of Chicago.

Mr. Whitman was born July 23, 1862, at Sterling, Whiteside county, Ill., the son of Platt L. and Helen M. (Quick) Whitman. His early education was received in the public schools of Sterling and at Edwards Academy, also of his native place.

When he was eleven years old he worked in a Sterling stationery store and in 1879 began work which lasted two years in a wagon shop, doing painting, etc. He commenced business for himself in 1881 as a house painter and paper hanger. In 1884 he was engaged in the manufacture of farming implements.

Mr. Whitman moved to Chicago in 1890 and took the first position which offered itself. It happened to be that of street-car conductor, and he kept it for eight months. His life's work dawned upon him when he entered upon the duties of guard in the Cook county jail. He acted as guard for two years and showed such interest in his employment that he was advanced to clerk of the jail at the end of two years. He was appointed jailer on May 1, 1895, and during twelve years of work in that capacity the methods which he followed in dealing with the thousands of prisoners under his care attracted to him a national recognition.

On June 1, 1907, he was appointed superintendent of the house of correction, an institution that averages nearly 2,000 inmates daily. Mr. Whitman's knowledge of crime and its causes made him a particularly valuable member of the Chicago vice commission which was appointed by Mayor Busse in 1910.

Mr. Whitman is the author of several works on the discipline of mankind, principal among them being "Tamer of Men," "Perfecting the Work of Correction," and "Correctional Discipline."

He is a member of the Illinois, City and Hamilton clubs, the Chicago Association of Commerce, the National Union, the Modern Woodmen of America, the Central Howard Association, the Chicago Men's Alliance and the Knights of Pythias. His address is House of Correction, Chicago.

GEORGE RANDALL PARRISH was born in Kewanee, Henry county, Illinois, June 10, 1858; parents, Rufus P. and Francis (Hollis) Parrish, educated in the public schools, graduating from the Kewanee high school in 1875, afterward attending Lake Forest Academy, Griswold College, Davenport, Iowa, and the Iowa State University. Received the degree of LL. B. at Iowa in 1879, and that of Litt. D. in 1911. Practiced law at Wichita, Kansas, for two years with marked success, but failure in health compelled him to seek an out-of-door life. Crossed the plains overland in 1882. Arriving at Las Vegas, discovered that conditions had arisen in Wichita which left him practically penniless. For the following three years he worked at anything possible — ran cattle in the Pan Handle, fired an engine on the Santa Fé, and prospected extensively in Arizona and northern Mexico. Working north, he became a surveyor's assistant in Colorado, and finally drifted into newspaper employment in Denver. During the years following, he did daily newspaper work in Omaha, Sioux City, and Chicago, and had charge of weekly papers at Grafton, Neb., and Kewanee, Ill.

While engaged in commercial journalism in Chicago, in 1903, published his first work of fiction through A. C. McClurg & Co., "When Wilderness Was King." Since then, has published the following books, devoting his entire time to literary work: "My Lady of the North" (1904); "A Sword of the Old Frontier" (1905); "Bob Hampton of Placer" (1906); "Historic Illinois" (1906); "Beth Norvell" (1907); "The Great Plains" (1907); "Prisoners of Chance" (1908); "The Last Voyage of the Donna Isabel" (1908); "My Lady of the South" (1908); "Love Under Fire" (1909); "Don McGrath" (1910); "My Lady of Doubt" (1911); "Keith of the Border" (1911); "Molly McDonald" (1912.) A million copies of these books have been sold, many editions going abroad.

Married Mary A. Hammon, at Howells, Neb., in 1887, and from this union two children survive. In 1902 was married to Rose I. Tyrrell. Holds membership in the National Geographical Society and Mississippi Valley Historical Society, and is Past Exalted Ruler of the Kewanee Lodge of Elks. Residence, Kewanee, Ill. President Iowa State University Alumni Association.

NOBLE CRANDALL, banker and broker, of Chicago, was born at Moncton, N. B., on the twenty-eighth day of March, 1880. He is the son of Noble and Laura (Rand) Crandall. He was educated in the public schools of Windsor, N. S., and moved from Nova Scotia to Boston, Mass., in 1900.

He was engaged with the Paine Furniture Company of Boston until 1901, and then was employed in the Boston office of Steere & Burr, bankers and brokers. When that firm opened a Chicago branch on Feb. 1, 1903, Mr. Crandall was transferred to Chicago as assistant manager. He was appointed manager of the Chicago branch on March 1, 1904. In 1905 the firm was changed to George H. Burr & Company and he became its resident partner.

George H. Burr & Co. maintain offices in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis and San Francisco, and cover the whole country through their representatives. Their organization is one of the most efficient in the country. Doing a general banking business, they are in touch with conditions throughout the country, and in offering commercial paper and stock issues for investment, their facilities are of the best. They do not handle stocks on the market, but confine themselves in a general way to investment and commercial paper.

Mr. Crandall is a member of the Union League, the Mid-Day, Chicago Yacht, South Shore Country and Homewood clubs. He was married on June 22, 1904, at Somerville, Mass., to Miss C. C. Eldridge, and has three children, Benjamin Noble, Charles Eldridge and George Burr. His home is at 5320 Cornell Avenue and his office is in The Rookery.

NDREW JOSEPH GRAHAM, head of the Chicago banking house of Graham & Sons, is a native of Chicago, having been born in that city Feb. 5, 1861, the son of John and Bridget Graham.

He became a student at St. Patrick's academy and later attended the Scammon public grammar school. He began his business career as an errand boy in the employ of the furniture house of John M. Smyth & Co. While in the service of this company he used to black stoves on the site where his banking institution is located at the present time.

From Smyth & Co. young Graham went into the employ of Geohegan & Revell (now A. H. Revell & Co.), which was then doing a business in second hand furniture. Afterward he worked for Napoleon Barsaloux, a furniture merchant. Later he became associated with his father in a steamship agency and book selling business.

Eventually he succeeded to his father's business and in 1890 embarked in the general banking business, in which he is now engaged with his sons.

Mr. Graham was appointed commissioner of the west parks in 1893 by Gov. John P. Altgeld. He was re-appointed by Gov. Tanner in 1898 and held the position until 1901, when he resigned on account of business reasons. He was a candidate for the democratic nomination of mayor of Chicago in 1911.

The Royal League, the Royal Arcanum, the Knights of Columbus, the Chicago Athletic association and the Illinois club are among the organizations to which Mr. Graham belongs. His office is at 159 W. Madison St.

ANDREW J. GRAHAM

DWARD DICKINSON, banker and broker of Chicago, is the son of Charles and Eliza E. (Burnham) Dickinson and was born in Chicago, Nov. 2, 1863. With his parents he moved to Milwaukee, Wis., in 1865, but returned to the city of his birth eight years later and finished his education in the public schools.

His first position after leaving school was as a messenger in a bank, in 1878. He was paying teller of the Metropolitan National Bank during the years 1884 to 1892, second assistant cashier from 1892 to 1894, and was assistant cashier at the time of the consolidation of the bank with the First National Bank, of which he also became assistant cashier.

In 1904 he resigned his position and organized the firm of Edward Dickinson & Company, dealers in commercial paper. He was president of the La Grange State Bank from 1899 to 1906 and was one of the organizers and is now one of the directors of the National Produce Bank. He is a director of the State Bank of Geneva, Ill. In 1901 he was treasurer of the Lincoln Park commissioners.

JOHN S., FIELD, president of the Knickerbocker Ice Company and The Consumers Company, of Chicago, is a native of Beloit, Wis., where he was born Aug. 14, 1847, the son of Spafford C. and Martha Ann (Durgin) Field. He was educated in the Beloit high school and after his graduation came to Chicago, where he obtained employment with Swett & Crouch, ice dealers, in 1867.

The business was purchased in 1879 by E. A. Shedd & Company, of which Mr. Field was a member. The firm was incorporated in 1885 and Mr. Field was vice-president and general manager. He was elected president of the company in 1898, after it had been reorganized into the Knickerbocker Ice Company and had absorbed thirty-five other ice companies of the city.

In addition to being at the head of the Knickerbocker and Consumers companies, Mr. Field is president of the Eastern Indiana Company and director of many western subsidiaries of the New York Central lines. He also is a director of the Chicago, Terre Haute & Southern Railway Company.

The career of Mr. Field is an illustration of the immense possibilities which the intricate business life of Chicago offers to the youth from the country and the small city who comes to the metropolis with a willingness to work and an eye for the recognition of opportunity. Ability for organization, concentration of endeavors until success is won, and readiness to concede to others the full measure of their worth are qualities which have been the basis for the building of his high business status.

Politically, Mr. Field is a republican. He is a member of the Chicago Association of Commerce, and of the following clubs: Union League, I. A. C., C. A. A., Calumet, Mid-Day, South Shore and Press of Chicago, and of the Lawyers in New York. His office is at 39 South La Salle St.

WILLIAM A. GARDNER, president of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway, was born at Gardner, Ill., in March, 1859. After attending the common schools, he learned telegraphy and began his railroad career as a telegraph operator on the Chicago & Alton railroad at Lemont, Ill., in 1872.

He entered the service of the Chicago & Northwestern road in 1878, and has been connected with it in one capacity or another ever since. He was assistant superintendent of the Wisconsin division from 1885 to 1890, superintendent of the same division from 1890 to 1896; assistant general superintendent of the road from 1896 to 1899; general manager from 1899 to 1906, and vice-president from 1906 to 1910. He was elected president of the road in 1910.

Mr. Gardner also is president of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railway; vice-president of the Macoupin County Railroad; vice-president of the Superior Coal Company and president of the Consolidated Coal Company.

Mr. Gardner succeeded Marvin Hughitt, who was elected to the chairmanship of the board of the Northwestern road. At the same time he was elected a director, succeeding Hamilton McK. Twombly.

"I have always tried to be a first-class subordinate," said Mr. Gardner once, in explanation of his work as a railroad man. "We can't all be general managers, but we can all try," he said on another occasion, when an old associate congratulated him on his appointment as general manager. These two expressions sum up the secret of his success.

There is, perhaps, no better illustration in railroad circles of the adage that perseverance brings success than the rise of President Gardner. It was with deliberation that he joined the Northwestern forces in 1872. At that time he is said to have determined to stick to the road until he reached the top. It is related of him that he refused at least two railroad presidencies during the period that he was vice-president of the Northwestern, giving as his reason that he preferred to remain with that road because he knew every foot of it and every man on it.

In politics Mr. Gardner is a republican. His clubs include the Union League, Mid-Day, Industrial, Country of Evanston, Evanston, Glen View and Hamilton. His residence is in Evanston and his office, at 226 W. Jackson Blvd., Chicago.

WILBUR GLENN VOLIVA, general overseer of the Christian Catholic Apostolic Church in Zion, and John Alexander Dowie's successor as head of the Church, was born in 1870, near Newtown, Indiana. His father, a lawyer by profession, occupied a farm near his place of practice, and General Overseer Voliva lived on this farm until the commencement of his college career. After a five years' course he was graduated from Union Christian College, at Meron, Sullivan county, Ind. At the age of nineteen he was ordained to the ministry in the Christian (sometimes called the New Light) Church.

He served three years as pastor of the Christian Church at Linden, Ind., and one year as pastor of the same denomination's Church at Urbana, Ill. Upon leaving Urbana he pursued theological studies for a year in the seminary at Stanfordville, N. Y., during part of which time he supplied the pulpit of the Chestnut Street Christian Church in Albany, N. Y. His next pastorate was at York Harbor — on the Maine coast — where he remained several months. Soon after leaving York Harbor he became a member of the Disciple Church, and, in the fall of 1895, he entered Hiram College, at Hiram, O., where he won the degree of B. A. At the same time Union Christian College conferred upon him the degree of Bachelor of Divinity.

After his graduation he was pastor for eighteen months of the Christian Church at Washington Court House, O. He took his stand with John Alexander Dowie, Feb. 22, 1899. In April, 1899, he was ordained to eldership in the Christian Catholic Church in Zion and for fourteen months was elder-in-charge of the north side Zion Tabernacle, Chicago. He was assigned to Cincinnati, O., and in 1901 was called back to headquarters by Dr. Dowie. In August, 1901, he was ordained overseer and assigned to duty in Australasia.

A biographer says: "His ministry is Australia proved a phenomenal success. He took a keen interest in the upbuilding of Zion City, in the United States, and during his ministry over 500 Australians crossed the ocean in order to have the privileges of a home in Zion City.

"In January, 1906, upon the failing of the health of Dr. Dowie, he sent for Overseer Voliva to return to Zion City and become the deputy general overseer of all Zion's work. The latter arrived in Zion City Feb. 14, 1906, and immediately assumed the onerous duties. Dr. Dowie was at the time in Jamaica, where he had been taken to avoid the severe northern winter, in a state of precarious health and unable to help himself; and, by reason of the severe mental strain of years and fatigue, he was, much of the time, irrational, and labored under harrowing hallucinations, and from far Jamaica was issuing orders and attempting policies impossible for Zion and Zion City. The unfortunate condition of affairs naturally made Deputy General Overseer Voliva's task no light one, but he soon succeeded in partially re-establishing the confidence of the people of Zion City and that of the business world.

"He was not permitted to complete that confidence. For some time lax business practices had obtained in the affairs of Zion and Zion City, caused no doubt by Dr. Dowie's oversanguine temperament and by misinformation given him by officers not fully in harmony with Zion's ideals. Finally, the deputy general overseer felt compelled, at the instance of a wailing people, to protect the innocent from certain financial wreck, and if possible, save the situation.

"On the advice of counsel, the people were fully advised of the situation, and April 1, 1906, with practically one voice, Deputy General Overseer Voliva was asked to lead them and Zion's affairs, and at the same time it was demanded that Dr. Dowie, by reason of his mental and physical condition, should be retired. Acting upon the suggestion of a few of his attendants, Dr. Dowie attempted to prevent this action, and all Zion was soon in the midst of a war of supremacy. Dr. Dowie appealed to the courts. The contentions of those who sought the retirement of Dr. Dowie and the substitution of Deputy General Overseer Voliva were sustained. A receiver, however, was appointed at the instance of non-Zion creditors, and everything belonging to Zion was turned over to the receiver in July, 1906.

"Even when the receiver was in charge, General Overseer Voliva's work was not confined to the ecclesiastical field. He realized that as leader of a people who regard all of life's activities sacred it devolved upon him to accomplish the dissolution of the receivership. Zion had to be reconstructed. It was an imperative necessity. From his viewpoint the age, and Christianity itself, demanded it. The receiver has been discharged. General Overseer Voliva is in charge of both branches of his church, temporal and spiritual. Practically bankrupt when the property was turned over to him, the holdings of the church to-day in Zion City approximate in value one million five hundred thousand dollars, the realty holdings alone being three thousand acres of farming land, including eight hundred of desirable lake front, and two thousand building lots."

THE CHICAGO BOARD OF TRADE

IT was but the fulfillment of destiny that Chicago should become the leading grain market of this continent, if not of the world. Its geographical location on the Great Lakes, in the early days the only practical means of transporting bulky freight to the east, combined with the wonderful expansion of farm cultivation and production to the west of it, established the grain business as the leading industry in the then frontier settlement, and this proud position it has never relinquished. The history of the Board of Trade of Chicago is but the history of this city as a grain market. Its beginnings naturally were small. As early, however, as 1845 the grain business had assumed such proportions that the establishment of a grain exchange similar to those in the older cities of the East was agitated in a local newspaper called the "Merchant."

Nothing came of this suggestion until the year 1848. On the thirteenth of March of that year a call was issued for a meeting of the business men of the city to organize such an Exchange. The movement was started by Messrs. T. Richmond and W. L. Whiting. At the first meeting a constitution was adopted and a committee appointed to draft by-laws. At the second meeting, on the first Monday of April following, the Association was fully organized, with Mr. Thomas Dyer as the first president, and a general invitation was extended to all merchants to meet daily at the first home of the Exchange, over George J. Harris' flour store on South Water Street, rented for $110 per annum.

Space forbids any description of the early trials and vicissitudes through which the institution struggled to its present position of pre-eminence. Nothing but the splendid enthusiasm and far-sighted optimism of its founders kept it alive. Every expedient was resorted to in order to maintain the interest in the organization. In these early days, however, were established those high-minded principles of commercial rectitude and integrity between members which are everywhere associated with this Exchange and which even its enemies are forced to concede.

In 1851 the membership of the board had grown to about 400, half of whom were active. This forced the removal to larger quarters at the corner of South Water and Clark streets, which were leased at an annual rental of $250. The activity of the new institution grew apace with the expanding grain business. The years 1858 and 1859, following the panic of 1857, were the most prosperous years of the Exchange since its organization. A need was felt for its legal incorporation under the laws of the state, and this was accomplished in the latter year. It still exists under this charter.

The splendid record for patriotism which the board maintained in the critical period of the Civil War must be passed over for lack of space. Upon the cessation of the war, a renewed impetus was given to the grain trade at Chicago, and likewise renewed activity took place upon the Board of Trade. On August 15, 1865, the board moved into its handsome new quarters in the Merchants Exchange Building at La Salle and Washington streets, for which it obligated itself to pay an annual rental of $20,000. Thus, in seventeen years, its growth was so phenomenal that its rent for business purposes grew from $110 to $20,000 a year. This building was destroyed in the fire of 1871, but was rebuilt and re-occupied by the board on the first anniversary of the fire, October 9, 1872, where it remained until the completion, May 1, 1885, of the building upon its present site at Jackson Boulevard and La Salle Street. About this time memberships, which were practically gratuitous in the early days of the organization, reached the highest value in the entire existence of the board, several having been sold at $5,000. Likewise the initiation fee had been raised from $5 to $5,000. This account indicates in decidedly superficial way the growth of the Board of Trade in connection with the grain trade of Chicago. It was established to meet a pressing demand for a place where the buyers and sellers of grain might meet and transact business at the least expense of time and convenience. It has become, by the evolution of time, the market place of the world for these commodities. No one can doubt that the growth and prosperity of Chicago in the grain industry have been largely due to the enterprise and business foresight of the Chicago Board of Trade and its members.

THE LIVE STOCK EXCHANGE NATIONAL BANK, located within the boundaries of the Union Stock Yards at Chicago, is transacting business under its third national bank charter. It represents by its directory, composed of the leading financiers in the packing industry, its progressive, alert and able officers and ample capital, forty-four years of the phenomenal growth of the Chicago live stock market from small beginnings to its present gigantic proportions. Here it is that the enormous daily receipts of live stock are converted into cash and the clearances made through this natural channel.

This bank has always kept well abreast of the times and wisely adapted itself to constantly changing conditions, pursuing a broad-gauge policy toward its customers in directly promoting the best interests of the live stock business at Chicago. Country bankers whose customers are the live stock producers have been constantly attracted to the special advantages offered by this bank through its ability to handle proceeds of live stock sales with promptness and satisfaction and without loss of time, both in interest and notice of credit.

Its present large line of country deposits is rapidly increasing, for these and other excellent reasons. Its helping hand reaches far, and not only strongly grasps the legitimate lines of business which the name indicates, but also is in close touch with and well able to take care of any and all business which a Chicago bank is called upon to handle. The unfailing courtesy of its officers gets business and keeps it, and all within the limits of sound banking.

S. ELLA WOOD DEAN, society woman and authoress of Chicago, was born at Corona, Ohio.

She was brought to Chicago by her parents when she was a year old and lived until a few months ago at the family residence at 3924 Michigan Avenue. Recently Mrs. Dean moved to 5000 Drexel Boulevard.

Mrs. Dean is a cultured singer and a noted horsewoman. She has traveled extensively and speaks French, German, Italian and other foreign languages fluently.

Her first novel was entitled "Shibboleth." Her latest work, called "Love's Purple," has elicited comment because of its bold treatment of social conventions.

Mrs. Dean is an ardent believer in women's rights and has taken an active part in the fight for the ballot for women in Illinois.

She is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Art Institute, the Amateur Minstrel Club, the Chicago Woman's Club, the Colonial Dames and other clubs and societies.

Mrs. Dean is the daughter of the late Dr. Samuel E. Wood, a pioneer Chicago physician, who died in 1908. She is the widow of the late John E. Dean, deceased 1908.

Very Sincerely
Ella Wood Dean

JOSEPH LEGRIS, DECEASED

From the coming of Joseph Legris, in 1844, to the present time the Legris family has been conspicuous in the life and development of Kankakee county. The present head of the house, Frederick E. Legris, is president of Legris Bros. Bank, one of the substantial financial institutions of Kankakee. Joseph Legris was born in St. Leon, P. Q., Sept. 7, 1827. In 1853 he went to California where he acquired a competence, which he used in fostering the growth of the country around Bourbonnais, Ill. He married Cleophe Sylvester, May 10, 1857, and eight children were born to the union. On the decease of Joseph Legris, March 30, 1888, his son Frederick E., became administrator of the Legris estate and has since been known as a man of large affairs and the chief magistrate and first citizen of Bourbonnais.

THE AMERICAN STEEL FOUNDRIES was incorporated under the laws of New Jersey, June 26, 1892, and acquired the following properties: The Sargent Company of Chicago; Reliance Steel Castings Company of Pittsburg; Franklin Steel Casting Company of Franklin, Pa.; Leighton & Howard Steel Company of East St. Louis, Ill.; American Steel Foundry Company of Granite City, Ill., and the American Steel Castings Company of Alliance, O., Chester, Pa., Sharon, Pa., and Norristown, Pa. Since then the company has acquired the Simplex Railway Appliance Company of Chicago and control of the American Steel Bolster Company.

It has an authorized and issued capitalization of $17,184,000. Much of the company's tonnage is derived either directly or indirectly from railroads, particularly for cars and locomotives. It manufactures cast-steel bolsters, wheels, couplers, brake-beams, Andrews side frames, and all kinds of steel castings.

The company has foundries at South Chicago and Indiana Harbor. Its offices are at 72 West Adams Street. Officers: President, R. P. Lamont; first vice-president, George E. Scott; second vice-president, R. H. Ripley; third vice-president, W. J. Lynch; secretary and treasurer, F. E. Patterson; comptroller, Thomas Drever. Directors: William V. Kelley (chairman), E. H. Gary, John M. Harrison, W. W. Butler, Morris Bachman, E. F. Goltra, W. D. Sargent, Arthur J. Eddy, George B. Leighton, Max Pam, Charles Miller and Edward Shearson.

HOOD McKAY, president of the O. S. Richardson Coal Company, of Chicago, was born in New York City, Feb. 29, 1868. He was an anthracite operator in Pennsylvania, for many years, and later a mining engineer. He is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

At the two storage, preparation and reshipping docks of the O. S. Richardson Coal Company, located on the north and south branch of the Chicago river, are stored more than 100,000 tons of Susquehanna anthracite, in addition to the soft coal and coke, and the tonnage in the team hoppers and storage bins of the rail yards. The natural breakage incident to handling in and out of the great coal barges requires — in order that the coal may yield a maximum of efficiency to the consumer — a complete and thorough retreatment and preparation. When the coal goes through the Richardson preparation plant sit is sorted, uniformly sized and the dirt is eliminated. Address 203 So. Dearborn St.

WILLIAM H. ROSECRANS, consulting engineer and president of the W. H. Rosecrans Engineering Co., of Chicago, was born in Kankakee, Ill., April 20, 1870. He is the son of Edwin and Louisa Rosecrans. He attended the University of Michigan and was graduated in 1894 with the degree of B. S., later C. E., and subsequently to this received an honorary degree in civil engineering. He has been chief engineer of the Indiana, Illinois, and Iowa R. R., and the Elkhart and Western R.R., superintendent of construction with the firm of J. G. White & Co., and chief civil and hydraulic engineer of the Arnold Co. He was also consulting engineer in U. S. irrigation and pumping water power. The company of which he is now president maintains offices in Chicago and New York. Mr. Rosecrans is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers and the American Institute of Electrical Engineers. Office, 30 N. La Salle St.

THE COLONIAL TRUST & SAVINGS BANK was incorporated June 11,1902, and commenced business in Chicago five days later. It engages in a general banking and trust business. The incorporators were H. B. Rose and Landon C. Rose, who previously were well known in the business of real estate loans. The institution has flourished from the start and to-day the capitalization is $600,000. The surplus and undivided profits aggregate $473,683.22, and the deposits have grown until they make the impressive total, in a recent report, of $7,208,759.25. In the offices at 137 S. La Salle street, northeast corner of Adams street, there are fifty-six employes who take care of the business of the institution. The official personnel is: President, Landon Cabell Rose; vice-president, Jacob Mortenson; vice-president and cashier, R. C. Keller; assistant cashiers, Emil Stuedli and W. F. Doggett. The directorate includes: H. G. B. Alexander, president of the Continental Casualty company; H. S. Black, president of the United States Realty and Improvement company; G. H. Coney, mortgage banker; John T. Emery, treasurer of the Chicago Rawhide Manufacturing company; George Lytton, vice-president of The Hub; John D. Ross, president of the Brooks & Ross Lumber company; W. N. Rumely, president of the M. Rumely company, Laporte, Ind.; Daniel J. Schuyler and Arthur W. Underwood, attorneys; Samuel B. Thomas, investments; John G. Walker, president of the Life Insurance Company of Richmond, Va., and Walter D. Young of Bay City, Mich.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD

THERE were 111 miles of railroad in operation in the state of Illinois in February, 1851, when Gov. French approved the legislative act incorporating the Illinois Central Railroad and signed the charter of that road, which has since played a most noteworthy part in the development of Chicago and the state. There were but 800,000 persons in the state at that time and the population of Chicago was only 28,000. The state treasury was all but bankrupt and the great prairies that now yield the richest crops in the Union were, for stretches of hundreds of miles, untilled and unproductive.

To-day the Illinois Central has more than 4,500 miles of track and its growth has been commensurate with the development of the state of Lincoln, Douglas, Grant and Logan. The original plans of the road called for the building of but 706 miles of track under the state charter.

The Illinois Central is the outgrowth of an act of congress passed Sept. 20, 1850, granting certain government lands in Illinois, Mississippi and Alabama for the construction of a "national highway" from Chicago to the Gulf of Mexico. The first surveying party was put in the field May 21, 1851, and rails, weighing 65 pounds to the yard, were shipped from England. Population quickly followed the construction of the road and farms were settled, crops grown, cattle, hogs and horses raised and heavy shipments of farm produce were ready for the road as soon as it was extended to new districts. Into the charter of the road was written the provision that in lieu of taxes seven per cent of the gross receipts were to be paid to the state, and in the sixty years of its existence the Illinois Central has contributed to the state treasury assessments which have kept the tax rate down and contributed to the wiping out of the state debt.

The Illinois Central was the first American road to furnish sleeping cars for its passengers, twenty years before the advent of the Pullman sleepers. Its suburban service out of Chicago was established in 1856, when George B. McClellan, then vice-president of the road, gave orders for the running of local trains to Hyde Park, then eight and one-half miles from the city. To-day the suburban service of the road is the largest in the world. Millions of suburban passengers ride on the Illinois Central suburban trains annually.

Electrification is a problem which has engaged the attention of the management of the road. This question has been referred to a committee named by the Chicago Association of Commerce, which is preparing a comprehensive report on the subject.

LA SALLE STREET NATIONAL BANK, CHICAGO

The La Salle Street National Bank opened for business May 9, 1910. In spite of the fact that this institution is one of the newcomers in the field, it has quickly won its standing among the leading banks of Chicago. Occupying spacious and completely modern quarters in The Rookery, at La Salle and Adams streets, it is most conveniently located to the commercial district. The administration of the La Salle Bank has been particularly efficient and capable and its policies have been conservative from the beginning. Following is a list of the officers and board of directors:

CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE AND ST. PAUL RY.

ONE of the most remarkable railroad building operations in the history of the world was the laying of the extension of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway to the Pacific coast, making it one of the five trans-continental railway systems of the United States.

The extension is called the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railway. It was built under the direction of President A. J. Earling at an approximate cost of $100,000,000. Feats of engineering skill and daring that were little dreamed of fifty years ago, when the first transcontinental line was projected to the coast, marked the progress of its construction.

The extension is approximately 1,400 miles in length. It connects with the older portion of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul at Mobridge, S. D., and runs through South and North Dakota, Montana, Idaho and Washington to the cities of Seattle and Tacoma. Building of the extension was begun on April 2, 1906, and the last rail was laid on March 29, 1909, the scene of the ending of the great undertaking being at Missoula, Mont.

Statistics compiled by officials of the road give some idea of the amazing project which was completed in the record time of three years. More than 60,000,000 cubic yards of material were excavated, 360,000 cubic yards of tunnel were driven, more than 200,000 tons of steel rails were laid and twenty miles of bridges were erected. One steel bridge, crossing the Missouri river at Mobridge, consists of three spans, each 425 feet long, with one trestle approach. It cost $2,000,000. Another great bridge across the Columbia river cost $1,000,000.

On the western slope of the Cascade Mountains, Topographer's Gulch, as deep as a tall skyscraper, required 630,000 cubic yards of filling, which necessitated the setting up of a $60,000 sluicing apparatus before a single cubic foot of earth was moved. The builders of the extension found the lowest grades, took the shortest cuts and connected the cities of Seattle and Tacoma with Chicago with a steel band over which travel fast, luxuriously appointed, newly built trains.

KEWANEE BOILER COMPANY, KEWANEE

THE KEWANEE BOILER COMPANY was organized in 1892 to take over the business of the Haxtun Steam Heater Company, which, during the preceding twenty-three years, had steadily grown to meet the increasing demand for steel boilers for heating purposes.

The recognized permanent success of its product very clearly demonstrated the truth of the prophesy made in the early sixties for a first class steel boiler. Soon after the organization of the Kewanee Boiler company, it became necessary to increase materially its manufacturing facilities to meet the demand for its products, the most important of which was the Kewanee fire-box heating boiler.

Among the original officers who are with the company to-day are: E. E. Baker, president; B. F. Baker, treasurer and J. P. Dugger, secretary. These men have continually directed the affairs of the organization and have adhered to their original determination to produce nothing else than the highest grade of goods possible. This policy has made necessary the splendidly equipped plant of the company at Kewanee, Ill., and the sales offices and stores in Chicago, New York City, St. Louis, Salt Lake City, Minneapolis, and Los Angeles.

The factory and general offices at Kewanee are shown on the opposite page. Here the company has the most complete, the most modern and the largest boiler factory of its kind in the world. The various buildings for the manufacture of boilers and radiation cover more than twenty-one acres. Several of the buildings are more than 600 feet long, and vary from 100 to 250 feet in width. Their construction is substantial and designed to provide light and sanitary conditions for the employes.

The electric, hydraulic, pneumatic and steam driven machinery is of the most modern kind obtainable.

The product is sold principally in the United States and Canada for the better class of public and semi-public buildings and is marketed through co-operation with the best heating engineers, architects and heating contractors. The result of the organization's policy is seen in the fact that for several years they have produced on an average one boiler every twenty minutes.

STANDARD FORGINGS CO. One of the most complete plants of its kind is that of the Standard Forgings Co., at Indiana Harbor, Indiana, whose product includes car and locomotive open-hearth steel axles and heavy forgings for steam and gas engines, and mining machinery. Included in the latter are rock crushers, hoist and drum shafts, stamp shafts and stems, cam shafts, eccentric shafts for jaw crushers, etc. The Standard Forgings Co. was incorporated in June, 1903, and early the following year a plant was completed on a 12-acre tract of land, adjoining the Indiana Harbor Railway, a belt line giving access to all the railroads entering Chicago. The initial capacity of the plant was 100 tons daily, but with additions made to the plant in 1905 and in 1906, the capacity was increased to 500 tons of finished product daily. The company's main building, which is of steel construction, 80 by 1,066 ft., 32 ft. high to the eaves and 50 ft. to the comb, is equipped with two 15-ton and two 10-ton electric cranes, which travel the entire length of the building, serving all the hammers and furnaces. These cranes have a speed of from 250 to 350 ft. per minute, a trolley speed of from 100 to 150 ft. per minute and a hoisting speed of from 16 to 40 ft. per minute.

ANDREW HEBEL

PERU BEER COMPANY, PERU, ILL.

The plant of the Peru Beer Company, a finely equipped modern brewery, is located at Center and Farm streets, Peru, Ill. From a small beginning in 1847, this brewery has risen to the front rank of manufacturing enterprise and possesses one of the best arranged brew houses in the state. Andrew Hebel, whose picture is shown herewith, is president, general manager and director; Charles Bulfer is secretary and director and Charles Brunner is director of the company. Louis Burkart is the sales agent. The company has a new four-story brew house, equipped with a copper beer kettle of 300 barrels' capacity. The brewery is supplied with water from an artesian well 1,254 feet deep. Andrew Hebel was born in La Salle in 1865, the son of Andreas Hebel. His family moved to Peru in 1869. Mr. Hebel is a graduate of the Peru public schools, the Bryant & Stratton's business college. He also attended St. Louis university. He was twice elected mayor of La Salle and is a director of the Peru schools, the Peru national bank and other corporations.

THE Matthiessen & Hegeler Zinc Company, of La Salle, Ill., was founded by F. W. Matthiessen and Edward C. Hegeler in 1858. The company has attained a high standing in the industrial world and the city of La Salle owes a great deal of its prosperity and population to it. In 1882 the manufacture of sulphuric acid as a bi-product was started, this company being the pioneer of the industry in the United States. At the present time eighty-five tank cars, of from twenty to thirty tons capacity each, are required to transport the product.

It requires about two tons of coal to smelt one ton of zinc ore, and consequently the practice is followed of bringing the ore to the coal, rather than the coal to the ore. Zinc ore had been discovered at Mineral Point, Wis., and in the search for coal La Salle was found by the pioneers in the industry to be the nearest point where fuel could be obtained. Another reason for the location at La Salle was the favorable position of the city in regard to the market. In the accompanying picture the office of the Matthiessen & Hegeler Company is seen in the foreground and the works are in the background.

HENRY HOERNER

STAR UNION BREWING CO., LA SALLE, ILL.

THE STAR UNION BREWING COMPANY, of La Salle, Ill., traces its history back to 1845, when Fred Kaiser conducted a small, crude brewery on the Rock Island tracks near Peru. From that small beginning, the Union Beer company was developed. Henry Hoerner (whose photograph appears above) bought an interest in the business in December, 1880, and the name was changed to the Union Brewing company, under which it was conducted until July 1, 1893, when the capital stock was raised to $150,000. Mr. Hoerner owning two-thirds and the Link family the other third. The brewery is now one of the largest in Illinois. Mr. Hoerner was yard-master of the Illinois Central railroad at Peru from 1872 to 1881. He was elected mayor of Peru nine times, the first time in 1887; address, La Salle, Ill.

AUTOMATIC ELECTRIC COMPANY BUILDING, Chicago. The Automatic Electric company was organized in 1901, to manufacture automatic telephone apparatus by which the use of the central operator is entirely dispensed with. It is operating a Chicago factory at the corner of Morgan and Van Buren streets with a floor space of approximately 187,000 sqaure feet, employing more than 1,000 people. Its apparatus is in successful operation in large Pacific coast cities and in many of the larger cities in the United States and Canada, and is now being adopted in European countries. The officers of the company are: J. Harris, president; C. D. Simpson, vice-president; H. A. Harris, 2nd vice-president; W. I. Patton, secretary; A. G. Wheeler, Jr., treasurer.

ILLINOIS ZINC

ONE of the most important industries in Peru, Ill., and one of the largest plants of the kind in the country, is the Illinois Zinc Company, which was incorporated Feb. 3, 1870. The original stockholders were Calvin Wells, Aaron French, William Mullins, James D. Layng and Archibald Means — all Pittsburg men except Mr. Means who came from Steubenville, O. The latter was the company's first general manager. After his death in May, 1898, Thomas F. Noon succeeded to the position.

The first president was Calvin Wells, who retained the office until his death, Aug. 2, 1909. He was succeeded by Frank S. Layng, of New York, who died Feb. 11, 1911, and was in turn succeeded by Thomas F. Noon, the former general manager.

The officers of the Company are:

President — Thomas F. Noon, Peru, Ill.
Vice-President — James D. Layng, Jr., New York.
Treasurer — Ben G. Wells, Philadelphia, Pa.
Secretary — W. S. Clow, Peru, Ill.

The principal office of the Company is at Peru. The eastern sales office is located at 81 Fulton St., New York City.

Starting from a comparatively modest beginning, the manufacturing facilities of the Illinois Zinc Company have been increased from year to year on account of the rapidly growing demand for the high grade of material produced.

IPANY, PERU, ILL.

The works are provided with all the latest machinery and improvements and according to one competent to judge the present equipment is not surpassed by any similar establishment in the world. The plant covers fifty-two acres of ground, of which twenty-five or more are under cover. The buildings of latest erection are built of steel, brick and concrete, and are of the most modern mechanical construction.

The frontage of the plant is more than one-half mile in length.

The original plant in 1870 was for the smelting of spelter only. At the present time the company has seven large gas smelting furnaces and produces nothing but a high grade of spelter made from the best quality of zinc blende ore from Joplin, Mo., and from southern Wisconsin.

In 1882 a sheet zinc rolling mill was added, which has been enlarged from year to year as business developed. The latest addition is a ribbon or strip mill where zinc can be rolled up to 250 feet in length.

In 1895 a sulphuric acid plant was added. This has been enlarged from time to time in keeping with other developments.

The company has its own tank cars sufficient for shipment of all the sulphuric acid produced.

In 1901 a coal mine was opened at Deer Park, Ill., from which the necessary fuel required at the plant is mined.

In all departments about 1,000 men are employed by the company.

THE MARQUETTE CEMENT MANUFACTURING COMPANY'S MILLS, located at La Salle, Ill., on the C., B. & Q., I. C., C. M. & St. P., C., R. I. & P., and C. & N. W. railways. The Marquette Portland cement was first manufactured in 1897. The original plant had only one small rotary kiln, which produced 150 barrels per day. Since that time additions and improvements have been made on an extensive scale and to-day the mill is producing cement at the rate of 1,500,000 barrels per year. A new power plant of 5000 H. P. has just been installed. It is equipped with compound condensing engines, Sterling water-tube boilers, electric generators, heaters, purifiers, automatic stokers, etc. Coal is delivered to the boilers through chutes from above and the ashes are discharged by the automatic stokers direct into cars which pass underneath the boiler-house. The electric current generated operates the entire mill, from mine to sacking platform. The officers of the company are: N. W. Duncan, president and treasurer; T. G. Dickinson, vice-president and general manager; Edward J. Dalton, secretary, and William Dickinson, sales manager. The Chicago offices are in the Marquette Bldg.

In the manufacture of MARQUETTE cement, the greatest care is exercised during all the different stages. The raw materials, consisting of limestone and shale, are mined from the cliffs immediately adjoining the mill, and, after being weighed and mixed in the proper proportions, are delivered to the crusher. From the crusher the material goes through driers which take away all moisture; and from the driers to the "raw mills," where it is pulverized to a fine flour. Then it is delivered to the kilns. In the kilns the chemical combination takes place, and at a temperature of 3,000 degrees Fahrenheit, the raw mixture becomes white-hot clinker, which has the appearance, when cool, of ordinary cinders. This clinker is cooled in 50-foot towers, through which cold air is circulated by blast fans. The cooled clinker is conveyed to the "finishing mills" where it is pulverized and sent to the stock house as finished cement. After sufficient time has elapsed for "curing" the cement is conveyed from the stock houses to the packing department, where it is weighed into bags and is ready for shipment.

FRITZ WORM

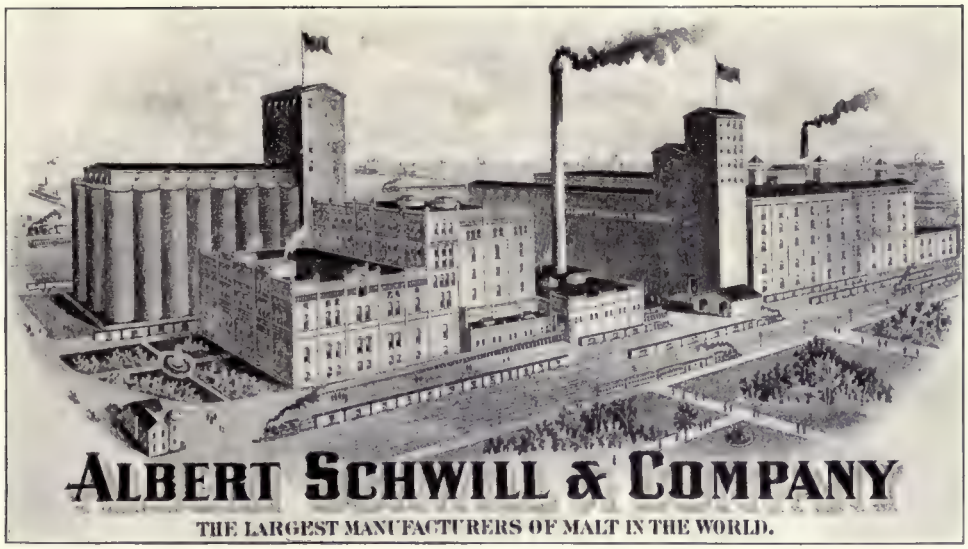
THE GERMAN-AMERICAN PORTLAND CEMENT WORKS

The German-American Portland Cement Works are located within the limits of the city of La Salle. The sales offices are in the Marquette Building, Chicago. The company manufactures the widely advertised "Owl" brand of Portland cement. After several trips to La Salle and to other places in the United States, Carl Prussing, director of the Portland Cementfabrik Hemmoor of Hamburg, Germany, selected La Salle as the site of the company's American plant in 1898. The plant was erected and the first cement ready for the market in 1900. When improvements that are under way are completed, the capacity of the company's plant will reach 2,000,000 barrels a year. The company's plant is ideally situated from a railroad standpoint. Fritz Worm whose picture appears above is president, treasurer and general manager. G. T. O. Becker is vice-president and secretary and E. L. Cox is general sales agent.

LINK-BELT COMPANY, CHICAGO PLANT

The Link-Belt Company is a pioneer and leader in the design, development and manufacture of chains, wheels and other equipment for the continuous handling of raw and manufactured products in elevators and conveyors and for the transmission of power. It manufactures coal crushers, screens, tipple equipment, locomotive cranes, peck carriers, friction clutches, gears, sheaves, etc. It designs and builds coal washeries and locomotive coaling stations. The Ewart Manufacturing company, organized in 1875, with the associated interests, the Link-Belt Machinery Company, organized in 1880, as the Link-Belt Engineering company, organized in 1889, were merged as the Link-Belt Company in 1906. The Ewart works at Indianapolis, Ind., is the chain plant and the Link-Belt works at Chicago and Philadelphia are devoted to the engineering, machinery and structural steel departments.

THE CAREY BRICK COMPANY, of Chicago, was organized in 1910, for the manufacture of common and sewer brick. Thomas Carey is president and general manager of the company. E. B. Myers is assistant general manager, and William A. Sullivan is treasurer. The capacity of the company's plant is 300,000 bricks per day of eight hours. The concern is not incorporated.



CHICAGO BRANCH OF THE DIAMOND RUBBER COMPANY

The Chicago branch of the Diamond Rubber company of Akron, O., is located at 1531 South Michigan avenue. Charles H. Smith is the manager of the Chicago branch. The company maintains sixty branch houses in the principal cities of the United States, Canada and Europe. It manufactures solid and pneumatic tires, all kinds of mechanical rubber goods, hard rubber, insulated wire and cables, rubber boots and shoes, and waterproof clothing.

THE UNION STOCK

FOREMOST among the industries which have contributed to the commercial fame and fortune of Chicago is the live stock trade at the Union Stock yards. The fortunate geographical location of Chicago, in the midst of the most prosperous agricultural section of the United States, logically has established here the greatest live stock market in the world.

Surrounded on all sides with rich corn-producing soil and close to the great western short grass area, Chicago is the natural distributing point for the millions of live stock produced by the great army of farmers and ranch men who occupy the rural space between Ohio and the Rocky Mountains. In this area is produced the greater part of the beef, pork and mutton which goes to make up the daily bill-of-fare of the meat-eating population of the world.

About $1,000,000 per day in value is the measure of the live stock trade of Chicago. Previous to 1865 Chicago's live stock trade was handled and controlled by three or four of the principal railroads entering the city. A few small slaughter houses took care of the business chiefly for local consumption. Ten years later the refrigerator car made its appearance and practically from that day the city's supremacy as a live stock center began to grow. In 1866 the value of live stock handled in Chicago was $42,765,328. In 1875 the amount had increased to $117,533,942, in 1885 to $173,598,002, in 1895 to $200,584,380 and in 1905 to $300,472,480. In 1911 the value was $339,484,690 and the volume 16,397,492 head.

During 1911 271,660 carloads of stock were shipped into the stock yards. By head and value the classifications for that year were: cattle — head, 2,931,831, value, $180,206,174; calves — head, 521,512, value, $5,788,785; hogs — head, 7,103,360, value, $110,037,446; sheep — head, 5,736,244, value, $24,634,185; horses — head, 104,545, value, $18,818,100.

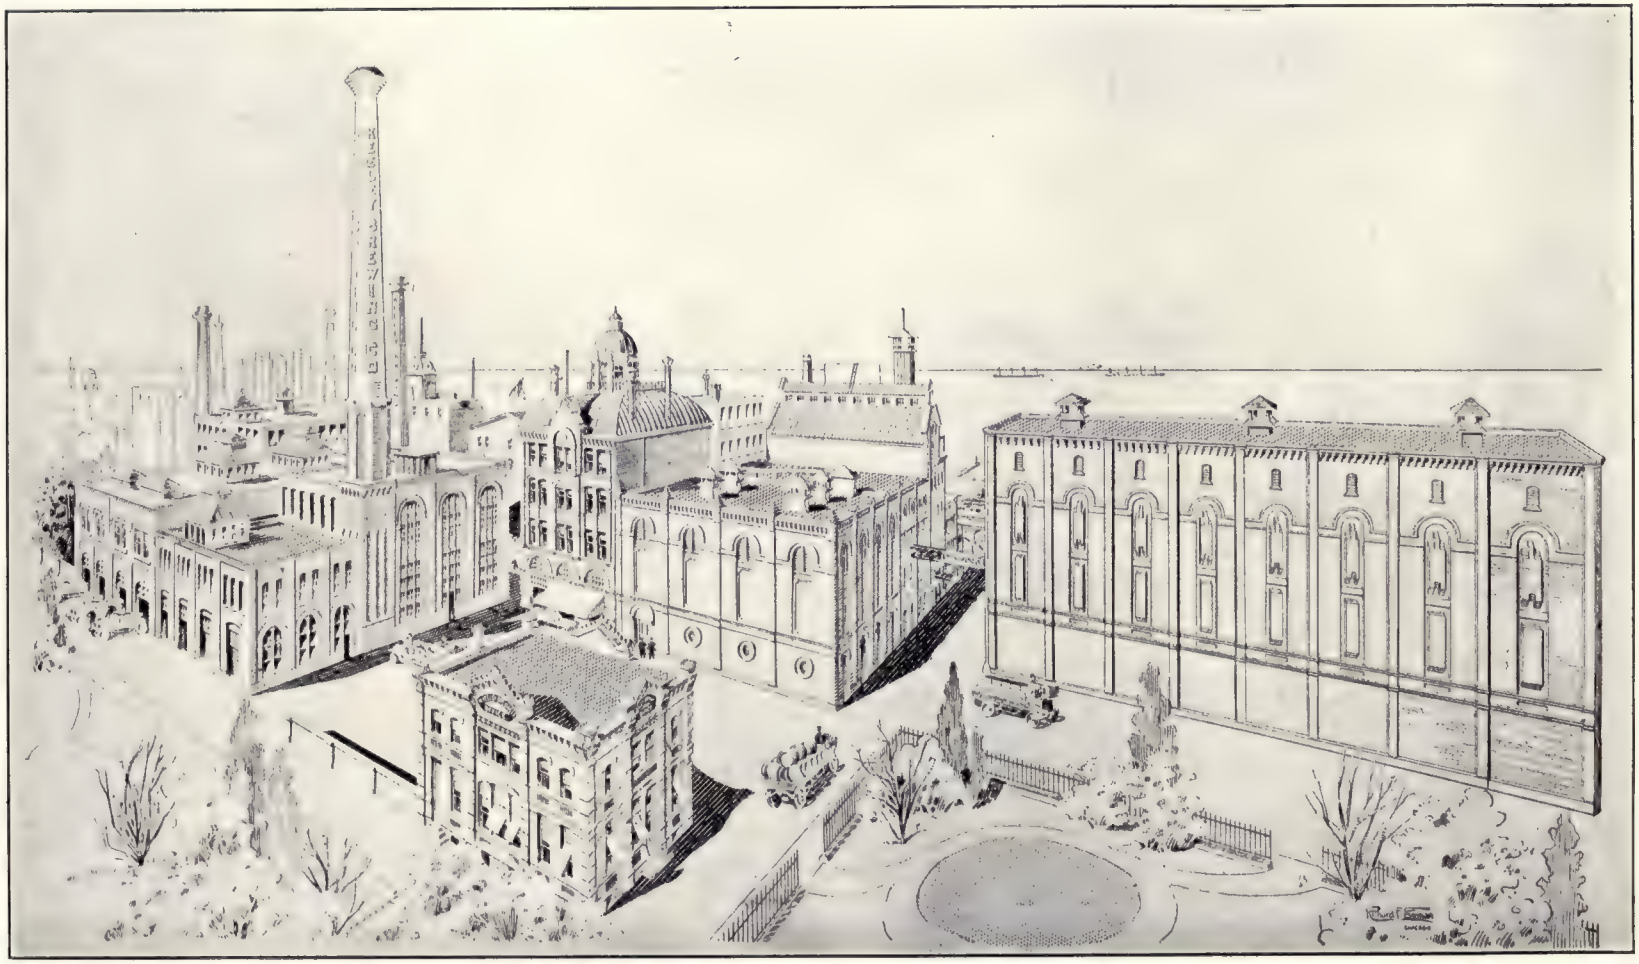
in one day 49,000 cattle, 87,000 hogs, and 71,000 sheep and in one week 95,000 cattle, 300,000 hogs and 227,000 sheep. The month's record stands at 385,000 cattle, 1,111,000 hogs and 895,000 sheep.

There are sixty-seven abattoirs in Chicago under government supervision. Nearly 700 acres in the southwest section of the city are given over to the packing industry. Pens and buildings for the yarding of stock take up 325 acres and the abattoirs which convert the major part of this stock into food take up more than 300 acres. There are more than thirty miles of streets and more than 300 miles of railroad tracks in Packingtown, as the principal part of the stock yards is called. There are 13,000 pens, 8,500 of which are covered or double decked. The water pumps have a daily capacity of 8,000,000 gallons and the reservoirs have a capacity of 10,000,000 gallons. There are 90 miles of water pipe lines and 50 miles of sewers. Troughs for feeding and watering animals have a total extent of 25 miles. Acres of brick pavements, concrete buildings, area ways and pens and other modern features are being rapidly installed in Packingtown.

Chicago's Packingtown is a world in itself and the one great feature of the city which the visitor feels duty bound to see. More especially is this true among visitors from abroad, where the reputation as a great packing center is even more firmly established than at home. Here a great army comes and goes every working day of the year and takes with it a remembrance of modern slaughtering methods on a most stupendous scale. The visitor is impressed with the thoroughness of it all and observes how carefully everything is utilized, even to the smallest hair and the last drop of blood. It is above all a magnificent lesson in system and industrial economy.

In addition to the vast amount of meat turned out from this industrial center hundreds of by-products are made out of material which was, only a few years ago, thrown away. It is the utilization of this material and the ability to convert it into useful merchantable things that have done more to build up Chicago's Packingtown than the sale of beef, pork and mutton.



THE KEELEY BREWING COMPANY'S PLANT, in Chicago, covers an area extending from Twenty-seventh street to one-half a block south of Twenty-eighth street and from Groveland avenue to the Illinois Central Railroad company's tracks. The company operates its own malt house, bottling and ale departments. All malt used is thoroughly inspected by the company's inspector. The bottling department is equipped with the most modern machinery. The ale department is practically a brewery in itself. Here Keeley's "Ye Old Inn Ale" is brewed. The Keeley Brewing company brews and bottles lager beer, ale and porter and has branches at Kansas City, Mo., Marquette and Ishpeming, Mich., South Chicago, Ill., Indiana Harbor, Whiting and Fort Wayne, Ind. Thomas F. Keeley is president and Eugene M. Keeley, secretary and treasurer of the company. Address, Twenty-eighth Street and Groveland Avenue, Chicago.

LAIRD & LEE

Chicago's claim to supremacy in the publishing business is based upon actual output. Of all the great houses whose books are read in every corner of the world, none, perhaps, have so large a following as Laird & Lee, whose school dictionaries, standard reference books, scientific and educational publications and fiction have a wide circulation. It was in 1887 that Laird & Lee began business in a little room at the corner of Lake and South Water streets, three titles being their stock in trade. They were so successful they were obliged to seek larger quarters the next year, and again in 1889, when they leased 4,000 square feet on Jackson boulevard. So large had their output become and so constant the demand of the public for their publications that in 1890 they again were obliged to move, this time to 263 Wabash Avenue, where 14,000 square feet of well-lighted space gave them room for growth commensurate with their needs. In 1911, however, they again found it necessary to enlarge their quarters and in the new electrically equipped fire-proof building on the northwest corner of Eighteenth Street and Michigan Avenue they are installed in adequate quarters. In 1894 William H. Lee purchased the interests of Fred C. Laird.

BUSH & GERTS PIANO FACTORY

The factory of Bush & Gerts, piano makers, occupies a block of ground at Dayton and Weed streets, Chicago. The business was founded by the late W. H. Bush, who conducted it for a short time under the name of W. H. Bush & Co. In 1906 the Bush & Gerts company, which had previously been incorporated, was made a million-dollar corporation. The officers of the company are William Lincoln Bush, president; John Gerts, secretary and treasurer; W. S. Miller, vice-president, and C. R. Stone, Fargo, N. D., second vice-president. The executive offices and warerooms of the company are located in the Bush Temple Conservatory of Music, at the northwest corner of Clark Street and Chicago Avenue. President Bush is one of the leading piano men of the United, States and has occupied high official positions in the National Piano Manufacturers' Association.

THE CORN EXCHANGE NATIONAL BANK, CHICAGO

The Corn Exchange National Bank is one of the big financial institutions that help make the name of La Salle street famous. It is housed in an impressive skyscraper which bears the name of the bank. The Corn Exchange Bank was established in 1871. The officers are: president, Ernest A. Hamill; vice-presidents, Charles L. Hutchinson, Chauncey J. Blair, D. A. Moulton and B. C. Sammons; secretary, John C. Neely; cashier, Frank W. Smith; assistant cashiers, James G. Wakefield and J. Edward Maas.

THE VIRGINIA HOTEL, CHICAGO

The Virginia Hotel, at Rush and Ohio streets, Chicago, is operated by the Virginia Hotel company. The building was erected by the late Leander J. McCormick and is located in a fashionable residence district just north of the river. The hotel is conducted on the European plan and is patronized largely as a fashionable family hotel.

KARPEN BUILDING, 910 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago. H. L. Stevens & Company, contractors, have offices Room 1109.

PALMER HOUSE

STATE AND MONROE STREETS, CHICAGO

ONE of the most celebrated and substantial buildings in Chicago, situated in the center of the business district, is the Palmer House, which was built in 1872, soon after the great fire. The style of architecture is massive and elegant, and the building faces on three of the principal streets of the city.

The Palmer House to-day represents the best in all things. Its cuisine cannot be excelled, and as for comfort, richness and solidity, this hotel, although one of the oldest in the city, ranks as the best.

Chicago is still and always will be proud of its celebrated hotel, as the years seem to only enhance its excellency. William C. Vierbuchen is the manager.

OLIVER TYPEWRITER COMPANY'S BUILDING AT 159-167 N. DEARBORN STREET, CHICAGO

The Oliver Typewriter company was organized in 1896 and occupied one room in the Atwood building, Chicago. It now enjoys its own home in the handsome five-story building erected in 1907 at 159-167 N. Dearborn street and occupies the entire structure for its general offices. The factory is located at Woodstock, Ill., where it was established in 1896. It has grown from a small building to many one story buildings covering more than ten acres of ground, and employs thousands of men in the manufacture of typewriters only. This is truly an Illinois product and from its phenomenal growth, its popularity and worth are easily estimated. Hundreds of thousands of Oliver typewriters are in daily use throughout the civilized world. The officers are men of prominence, force and ability. Lawrence Williams is president and general manager; Delavan Smith, vice-president; E. H. Smith, second vice-president and treasurer; Ricord Gradwell, second vice-president and assistant general manager; John Whitworth, second vice-president and superintendent of factory at Woodstock.

AVEINA APARTMENTS, CHICAGO

The Aveina Apartments, now under course of construction, on the block bounded by Sixty-second street and Vincennes and Vernon avenues, Chicago, make the largest apartment building in Chicago. Hall & Westerlind, 179 West Washington street, Chicago, are the architects.

THE HOME FOR AGED AND DISABLED RAILROAD EMPLOYES, at Highland Park, Ill., is supported through a voluntary contributions. It was incorporated in May, 1890. It had for its object to provide a home for worthy aged and disabled, helpless and destitute railroad men who are no longer able to provide for themselves, and aid those who by accident or from other causes are permanently incapacitated for railroad work to qualify themselves for some other occupation by giving them a free home while acquiring such ability, and in this practical way exemplify true brotherly principles. Since its inception it has cared for and sheltered about one hundred and sixty Brotherhood men who, had it not been for the Home, would have been charges upon their lodges, their families or the communities from whence they came. The Home has no fixed income and has to depend entirely upon the money voluntarily contributed by the four great railroad brotherhoods, namely, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, the Order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen. The building was dedicated and occupied April 12, 1910, and stands as a monument to the generosity and big-heartedness of the railroad brotherhood men of this country, Canada and Mexico.

RESIDENCE OF MRS. GEORGE M. PULLMAN, 1729 Prairie Avenue, Chicago

CHICAGO & NORTHWESTERN DEPOT. The new passenger terminal of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway, on Madison street, between Cana and Clinton streets, is a model in architectural stability and beauty and in the conveniences which it affords for the thousands of travelers who use it every day. The terminal is easy of access from all portions of the city. The Madison street and Milwaukee avenue surface cars, both east bound and west bound, pass by the Madison street main entrance; it is but a few minutes' walk from the Madison and Fifth avenue station of all the Elevated Lines; is reached by the bus lines running to and from the State street department stores, and is quickly accessible from all other directions. The station is a small city in itself, with lunch room, dining room, reception rooms, lounging and dressing rooms, smoking rooms, barber shop, bath rooms for men and women, drug store, telegraph offices, nurse and matron's rooms, physician's office, emergency apartment, etc. The detail of its appointments may be judged from the fact that in the immigrant section there is a laundry where the immigrant mother may wash her family's clothes. There are twenty-six gates leading from the grand concourse to as many different tracks in the train shed. The train shed itself covers an area of six acres.

THE BEULAH HOME AND HOSPITAL, at 2144 North Clark Street, Chicago, is entering on its seventeenth year. It is conducted by its founders, Mr. and Mrs. O H. Richards, and is a home where a girl or deserted wife may find shelter. Mothers and babes may continue in the home as long as may be necessary for their welfare. Questions as to race, creed or nationality find no place in the home. "Needy" is the password. Beulah Home is supported by voluntary contributions and asks the assistance of those interested in this sort of charity. The following are the members of the board of directors: James L. Reber, J. L. Reber Preserving Company, Eola, Ill., president; John H. Leslie, broker, 29 Lake Street, Chicago, vice-president; W. P. Goodsmith, M. D., 4625 Beacon Street, Chicago, secretary; Heber M. Goodsmith, M. D., 100 State Street, Treasurer, and Rt. Rev. Bishop Samuel Fallows, Rev. Milbourne P. Boynton, Willard P. Stearns, Edward H. Moore, M. D., and O. H. Richards.

RESIDENCE OF HAROLD McCORMICK, CHICAGO

VISITATION ACADEMY, Evanston. On the most elevated point of Ridge Avenue, stands the Visitation Academy of Evanston, an institution for the education of girls and young ladies. Fancy can scarcely picture a more ideal spot than this charming location, which is far enough removed from the busy city to insure the quiet surroundings so necessary to student life, while at the same time being within such easy access to the great metropolis and its suburbs that it is well patronized as a day school. The air of the academy is thoroughness in work and a careful development of such qualities as will fit its pupils for the highest and best duties of womanhood.

THE Metropolitan West Side Elevated Railway, of Chicago, through its industrial department, has been instrumental in locating numerous large and small industries outside the loop and near the outskirts of the city. The builders of the Metropolitan West Side Elevated Railway carried out a heavy trunk line of four tracks from the heart of the city straight west two miles, and then four double-track branches spreading out and covering a territory eleven miles in length and six miles in breadth.

All four branches operate over the main line around the Union Loop during the twenty-four hours of the day. The main line parallels Van Buren street from the loop to Marshfield avenue. Garfield Park branch leaves the main line at Marshfield avenue and parallels Van Buren street to Fifty-second avenue, then on the surface to Forest Park (Harlem). Douglas Park branch leaves the main line at Marshfield avenue and parallels Paulina street south to Twenty-first street; thence west parallel to Twenty-first street to Forty-third avenue, then on the surface to Fifty-second avenue and Twenty-second street. The Logan Square branch leaves the main line at Marshfield avenue and extends in a northwesterly direction to Robey street and Milwaukee avenue, and then parallel with Milwaukee avenue to Logan Square boulevard. The Humboldt Park branch extends west from Robey street and Milwaukee avenue, paralleling North avenue to Lawndale avenue. The Metropolitan company purchased property between Jackson boulevard and Van Buren street, from the river to Fifth avenue, and built a terminal, costing approximately $1,500,000. A regular service is operated in and out of Fifth avenue terminal morning and evening. The Aurora, Elgin & Chicago Railroad, which taps the Fox River Valley, runs all its trains into Chicago over the Metropolitan to Fifth avenue terminal.

The Northwestern Elevated Railroad is the four-track route of the Chicago elevated railroads. Its lines are extensively patronized by people living along the lake shore as far north as Wilmette, and in the beautiful residence district of Ravenswood. The main line leaves the Union Loop at Lake street and Fifth avenue and runs in a northerly direction, paralleling the shore of Lake Michigan. Belmont avenue is the junction of the main line and the Ravenswood division.

The Chicago and Oak Park Elevated Railroad is the original elevated line of Chicago, and runs west on Lake street through Austin and the suburb of Oak Park. It is a three-track route west from Rockwell street to Fifty-second avenue, a distance of three and one-half miles, which permits of express service during the rush-hour periods of the morning and evening.

The South Side Elevated Railroad is one of the most popular and convenient means of transportation on the South Side. All the main points of interest on the South Side are reached by its various branches. The main line runs south just east of State street to Fortieth street. The line runs east on Fortieth street, crossing Michigan avenue and Indiana avenue, then runs south to Sixty-third street, paralleling Grand boulevard. On Sixty-third street the line runs east to the terminus at Jackson Park, made famous by the Columbian World's Fair. The Normal Park branch leaves the Englewood division at Sixty-third street and Stewart avenue, running southerly and westerly. At Fortieth street and Indiana avenue the Kenwood branch extends to the east, with a terminus at Forty-second street, at the edge of the lake. Indiana avenue is also the junction for the Stock Yards branch, extending west. This line crosses Halsted street just north of the Dexter Park Amphitheater, and forms a loop in the heart of the stock yards.

THE COMMONWEALTH EDISON COMPANY OF CHICAGO is one of the world's foremost public service organizations. It supplies Chicago with electricity from its large central stations for lighting, heating, and power purposes, at wholesale and retail. It operates under a broad charter and valuable franchises, and by virtue of the reliability of its supply, appropriate rates for classified service, a progressive policy of rate reductions compatible with the wonderful growth of its business, it has won an unusually favorable popular regard.

GENERAL OFFICES, COMMONWEALTH EDISON COMPANY

It operates three principal and three subsidiary electric generating stations, of which the Fisk Street power house, with ten steam turbine generating units totaling 120,000 kilowatts capacity or 160,000 horsepower, and the Quarry Street station with six similar units totaling 84,000 kilowatts or 112,000 horsepower, are at present the largest. The third, known as Northwest station, is already operating two units of 20,000 kilowatts each, or together 54,000 horsepower and will ultimately be very much larger than either of the others.

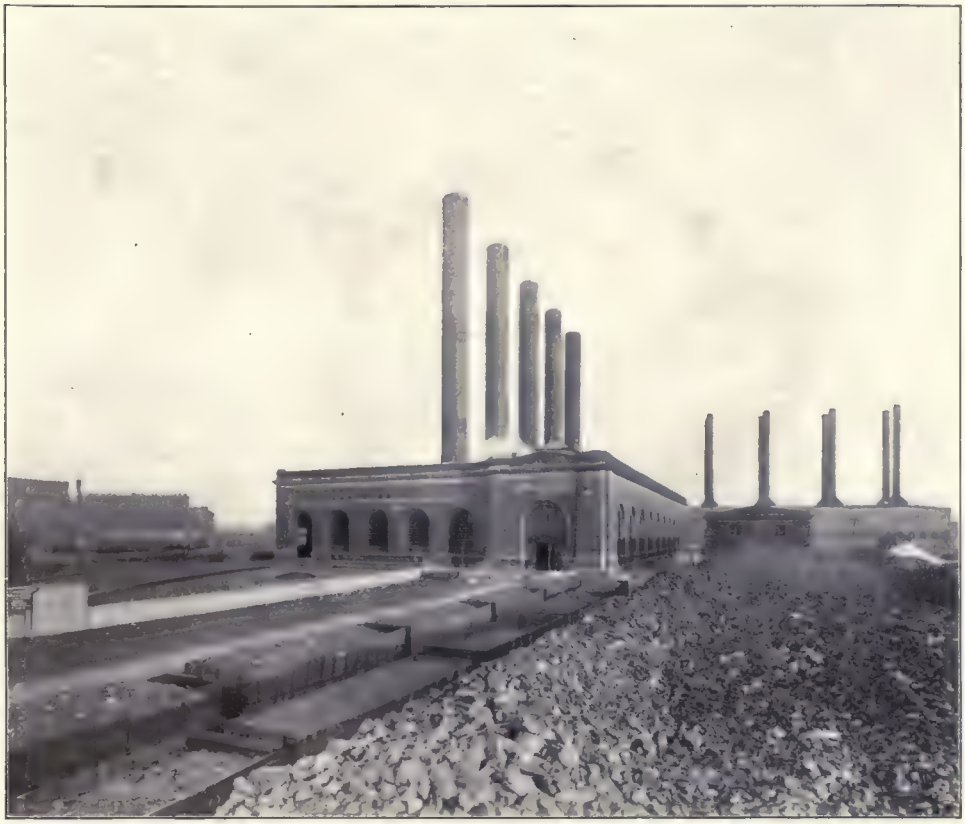
These stations deliver high-tension electric energy through underground cables to fifty-three sub-stations located in centers of demand.

In the downtown portion of the city twenty-two rotary converter sub-stations distribute direct current at 115 to 230 volts, but by far the larger part of the 196 square miles of Chicago receives alternating current service from other sub-stations at the same pressure.

Sixteen sub-stations contain very large storage batteries which are capable of supplying the service in adjacent sections for a short period in case of need.

Large stores of coal are maintained on the grounds at the generating stations and also at two coal storage yards just outside of the city, assuring an independent coal supply sufficient for a period of two or three months.

The coal burned in the company's powerhouses in one year amounts to approximately one million tons, consisting principally of Illinois screenings. The company's individual customers now number more than 140,000. Its wholesale customers are chiefly the local elevated and surface transportation companies. It sells annually one-third more electricity to one-third more consumers for about one-third less dollars than any other central station concern in the world.



FISK STREET AND QUARRY STREET POWER HOUSES OF THE COMMONWEALTH EDISON COMPANY, LOOKING FROM THE NORTH

The increase in connected load in one year is now considerably in excess of one million lamps of 50 watts each.

The company maintains a well-equipped new business department, employing a large number of solicitors. Experts are in charge of each branch of this work, and every facility is afforded prospective customers for estimating the comparative advantages of electricity for light, heat, and power from the central station.

The Company employs more than $60,000,000 of capital represented by stock and bonds. The annual appraisement of its physical properties and system, made by an independent firm of engineers, shows an actual value in excess of the Company's book value.

The stock of the Company is all in shares of $100 each and pays six per cent. It finds a ready market at $120 to $130 a share with slight fluctuations. The annual earnings are about $11,000,000.

The Company pays taxes, franchise remuneration, etc., totaling approximately $1,000,000 a year. The number of employes on the regular payrolls is now approximately 3,000, exclusive of day labor. Several important provisions for the general welfare of these employes are maintained.

COSMOPOLITAN ELECTRIC COMPANY STATION, CHICAGO

The Cosmopolitan Electric Company is a central station electric light and power company supplying consumers in a considerable portion of the city of Chicago where it maintains its distributing lines. The power house of the company, illustrated herewith, is situated on the south branch of the Chicago river, on Grove street just east of Canal street. This is a modern, complete and efficient power generating station of sufficient capacity to take care of the needs of the company for some years to come. It is equipped with four large steam turbines driving alternating current three-phase generators, the equipment including condensers, circulating water for which is secured from the Chicago river and high vacuum by which the greatest efficiency in the use of the steam in the turbine is secured. The offices of the company are located on the eighth floor of the Peoples Gas Building, Adams street and Michigan avenue.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO SETTLEMENT, at 4630 Gross Avenue, Chicago, was established in 1894 by the philanthropic committee of the Christian Union of the University of Chicago. In 1898 the settlement was incorporated. The gymnasium of the present building was erected in 1899, and the residents' house in 1905. Miss Mary E. McDowell began her work in the settlement in 1894 and has gathered other workers about her until the present number of resident workers is eighteen. The settlement is located in the great industrial community of foreign-speaking people who work in the stock yards and packing houses, and is closely identified with the life of the neighborhood. It has for its object the industrial, social, and moral betterment of those living in the community, and it co-operates with all other agencies working towards that end.

MENDOTA

THE city of Mendota is 82 miles southwest of Chicago at the junction of the Illinois Central and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railways.

It is the home and the place of the invention of the famous Tower corn cultivating implements which are widely used throughout the corn belt.

The original of these implements are manufactured at Mendota by the J. D. Tower & Sons Company.
